Brunch to Celebrate 2013, or Help Your Hangover

By Linnea Covington, December 31, 2012

It's no mystery: on the first day of 2013 you will probably be hungover, as will I, as will my boyfriend, as will just about everyone I know. But hey, isn't that what New Year's Eve is all about? Hence, brunch is in order to help ease you gently into a new year, and the one week you swear off booze because of some silly resolution.

Uptown, at A.G. Kitchen they also stay on the sinful side and chef Alex Garcia offers guests the ultimate hangover burger and shake combination for $29. The 100-percent ribeye burger comes with a crispy potato skin, cheddar, and bacon, and your choice of shake, including the salted caramel made with Jim Beam, malted powder, and caramel sauce.
